Healing is a process and we can determine how long the process will be. We are responsible for our healing not our trauma. Our response is our responsibility.

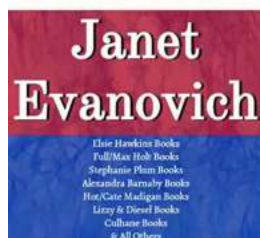

Everyone in life has been or will be rejected. The real problem is that we think we can avoid rejection. Rejection is really God's protection from what is not aligned with His plan and purpose for your life.

We must deal in order to heal. Most healing is painful and ugly at first but as we treat the wound consistently, we will see restoration.

Author Ivenetta Smith is a licensed minister, who has won hundreds of souls to Jesus Christ through street evangelism with a goal to share Jesus Christ through the ministry of reconciliation with the world at large.

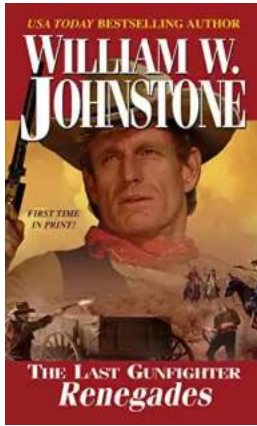

When you are healing, you need to avoid getting the wound infected.
