Twayne = equal parts:

Bukowski Hefner Mark T Freud

e-Snowden & the Will of Ferrell

Whether he is on a mountain hike, sitting at a bar, or eating in a restaurant, Twayne loves meeting people. Through observations gathered from a journey across the best of the Southwest, Twayne shares a collection of contemporary poems that highlight the varied personalities he met along the way.

Presented with a distinctive style, Twaynes provocative poems explore settings and people from Los Angeles to Northern California and Northern Arizona as he witnesses social interactions at the rogue bar where televisions outnumber Dodger pennants; at Bel-Air solstice parties where living, breathing cemeterians hang out, and an imaginary sushi place where a tousled bushy-hair cutie sits at the end of the food bar. Through it all, Twayne proves that life is best experienced when we open our eyes, ears, and hearts and embrace the uniqueness around us.

50 Scenes in 58 days shares an innovative collection of poems that presents a fresh, artistic look at society in a modern world.
