6 year old boy overwhelmed with the appreciation from his teacher and parents started off narrating his magical encounters.

Foreword:

Usually, children's literature is written by adults for children. But now we notice a welcome change i.e. the emergence of another new genre, children's literature about, for, and by children. Patronized by parents, encouraged by siblings and facilitated by digital platforms, this alternative type of children's literature is gathering momentum, As ardent readers we are delighted to enjoy our children's creative potentialities. When they can draw, play, act, swim and dance why not they contribute for literature. I am proud and elated when I did receive the soft copy of this wonderful storybook authored by my neighbor Srinivasan's son Arivan and scripted by his mother Lakshmipriya Jayapalan and sister Neharika Srinivasan. A first standard boy narrating amazing stories with awesome skills really looked like a magic happening. Here all the stories are centered on magical things. I wonder wherefrom our child prodigy writer got the magic wand to produce so many things endowed with magical powers? The Magical Balloon flies high carrying the boy to the sky. It not only amuses him but also teaches him science. It is the balloon filled with helium gas which takes him to new heights. So the boy learns the fact that the helium gas is much lighter than our atmospheric air. The Magical Skating Board teaches him the moral that it is not a good behavior to pick anything without parents' permission.....

My hearty congratulations to the mighty magician. In my childhood I enjoyed reading "Alice in the Wonderland". Now every child has got another wonderland created by Arivan who has created a lot of magical products. The stories have the power amuse every (child) reader and also inculcate sublime values.

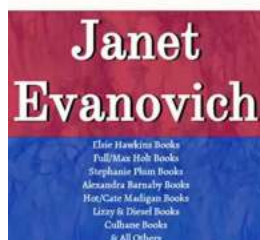

I am sure we have got a trend-setter in Children literature, a child prodigy writer with a promising prospect to reach new heights soon.
